

News Release: American Library Association

Public Information Office
American Library Association
50 East Huron Street
Chicago, Illinois 60611
312 944-6760

Thanks to her relentless efforts, preservation awareness is now reaching all levels of librarianship. Pamela Darling's outstanding accomplishments in library technical services exemplify the high professional standards to which this field is dedicated.

From: Peggy Barber, Director
Public Information Office

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

Pamela Darling, Columbia University, New York, was presented the Esther J. Piercy Award at a meeting of the Resources and Technical Services Division of the American Library Association, during the Annual Conference of the ALA in Dallas, the week of June 23 - 29.

The Esther J. Piercy is an annual citation presented in recognition of a contribution to librarianship in the field of technical services by younger members of the profession.

The citation presented to Ms. Darling reads as follows:

For her very effective leadership in the field of library material preservation.

From her early work as the liaison between the New York Public Library and the ALA Preservation Committees, to her most recent leadership of discussion groups and workshops, and her lectures and publications. Pamela Darling has provided needed focus on the relationship between the theory and practice of record preservation. Her work stresses the necessity to combine new technology for preserving original manuscripts with efficient management, in order to save the quickly multiplying records of our civilization. She has raised the issue of preservation at this most critical period when we are seeing the deterioration and inexcusable disappearance of many current records throughout the world.

- more -

add one - Esther J. Piercy

Thanks to her relentless efforts, preservation awareness is now reaching all levels of librarianship. Pamela Darling's outstanding accomplishments in library technical services exemplify the high professional standards to which this award is dedicated.

From: Peggy Barber, Director
Public Information Office

- 30 -

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

Pamela Darling, Columbia University, New York, was presented the Esther J. Piercy Award at a meeting of the Resources and Technical Services Division of the American Library Association, during the Annual Conference of the ALA in Dallas, the week of June 23 - 27.

The Esther J. Piercy is an annual citation presented in recognition of a contribution to librarianship in the field of technical services by younger members of the profession.

The citation presented to Ms. Darling reads as follows:

For her very effective leadership in the field of library material preservation.

From her early work as the liaison between the New York Public Library and the ALA Preservation Committee, to her most recent leadership of discussion groups and workshops, and her lectures and publications, Pamela Darling has provided needed focus on the relationship between the theory and practice of record preservation. Her work stresses the necessity to combine new technology for preserving original manuscripts with efficient management, in order to save the quickly multiplying records of our civilization. She has raised the issue of preservation at this most critical period when we are seeing the deterioration and inexcusable disappearance of many current records throughout the world.