01. HOLLEMAN, CURT, Education: University of Texas, MLS, 1973; University of Kansas, MA in English, 1967; Hope College, BA, 1965. Current Position: Deputy Director, Central University Libraries, Southern Methodist University, 1998-present. Previous Positions: Associate Director for Collection Development and Management, Southern Methodist University, 1984-98; Collection Development Librarian, Southern Methodist University, 1975-84; Assistant Professor of English, Park College, 1967-70. ALA Activities: ALCTS: Member, CMDS Publications, 2003-Present; ALA: Member and Consultant, Library Materials Price Index, 1992-Present; ALCTS: Member, Quantitative Measures for Collection Development, 1993-98; ACRL: Member, Statistics Committee, 1993-98. Publications: "Electronic Resources: Are Basic Criteria for the Selection of Materials Changing?" Library Trends, Spring 2000; "From Field of Dreams to The Godfather: Collection Development Today," Against the Grain, April 1998; "The Study of Subject Strengths, Overlap, and National Collecting Patterns," Collection Development: Access in the Virtual Library (Haworth Press), 1997; "Collection Issues in the New Library Environment," Collection Management, 1996. Honors, Awards, Prizes, Medals, Citations: Beta Phi Mu; Phi Kappa Phi. Accomplishments: Active in campus affairs, most recently on Provost's search committee and Common Readings Selection Committee for freshmen; co-edited two award-winning library publications; wrote several well-reviewed articles that are taught in library schools here and abroad.

STATEMENT: CMDS is the obvious choice to play a leading role in defining how libraries meet the challenge of providing affordable access to information, whether through encouraging the "open access" movement or through other strategies that will at least include an open access element. Collection developers also must address the need to preserve the electronic content that has come to dominate our recent collecting but that also can prove so elusive to save for the future. I would consider it a privilege to work on the pressing issues confronting collection development as the chair of CMDS; I would also consider it a privilege to encourage the continuation of our efforts in education and publishing. For it is certain that collection development will remain a most important function of libraries well into the future.

02. LANDESMAN, BETTY, Education: George Washington University, MS: Information Systems, 1997; Simmons College, MLS, 1976; Harvard University, MA: French Literature, 1968; Hunter College, BA, 1968. Current Position: Head, Collection Management, National Institutes of Health Library, 2004-present. Previous Positions: Associate Professor, University of the District of Columbia, 2003-2004; Head of Cataloging, Congressional Research Service, 2002-2003; contract positions in federal libraries, 2001-2002; Manager, Document Delivery Team, AARP Library, 1999-2001; Systems Training Librarian and Reference Librarian, George Washington University, 1996-1999; Systems Planning Coordinator, George Washington University, 1991-1996; Head of Cataloging and Systems Department, George Washington University 1988-1991; Product Manager for Serials and Acquisitions, CLSI, Inc., 1985-1988; Head of Serial Procurement, New York Public Library, 1984-1985; Head of Serials Department, Wellesley College Library, 1980-1984. ALA Activities: ALA Representative to NISO, 2003-present; ALCTS Research and Statistics Committee, 1998-2002; ALCTS CMDS: Collection Development and Electronic Media Committee, 2001-2005; ALCTS SS: Education Committee, 2003-present, Chair, 2005-06, First Step Award Committee, 2001-2003, Chair, 2002-03, Policy, Research, and Publications Committee, 1997-2001, Committee to Study Serials Standards, 1993-1997, Chair, 1994-1997, Union Lists of Serials Committee, 1989-1993 Chair, 1991-1993, Liaison to SISAC, 1991-1993, Policy and Research Committee, 1985-1988, Research Libraries Discussion Group, co-chair, 1984-85; ALCTS AS: Technology Committee, 2005-present. Offices Held outside of ALA: District of Columbia Library Association: Webmaster and list owner, 2001-02; Past President, 2000-01; President, 1999-2000; Vice-President/President-Elect, 1998-99; Library Technology Interest Group, co-chair, 1994-1998; Technical Services Interest Group, chair, 1990-91;

When planning a program on union listing, we made a successful proposal to the ALCTS Board to invite co-sponsorship from other groups outside of ALCTS to whom union listing was important. While this is more common now, at the time it was the first time such a proposal had been made. I cannot claim credit for the great program name “The Serials Pig in the Aggregators’ Poke”, but as co-program planning chair I do take pride in having helped to organize a program that had technical services and public services people actually having a conversation – a program which one person called “the best program (I’ve) ever attended at ALA”. My diverse experience helps me to see the similarities and synergies among us rather than the differences, particularly as we approach collection development and management.

STATEMENT: I bring to this election 28 years of ALA membership, most of it serving ALCTS in sectional activities and much of it in a leadership role. While it may not be apparent, I have quite a bit of collection development experience. I am currently a selector, and have been one in both academic and special libraries and in both technical and public services positions. I find in the 21st century that I spend most of the time trying to manage increasingly electronic collections and much less time developing them. One of my goals on the Executive Committee would be to examine the current CMDS committee and discussion group structure to see if there are additions or changes that would help meet members’ current needs. Another goal would be to look at increased synergies between CMDS, other sections in ALCTS, and other divisions in ALA. A great deal of programming on and discussion of collection development and collection management takes place in the ALCTS Serials Section, RUSA, even LITA. I would like to explore how CMDS can find additional ways to cross the divisional boundaries.

03. KOSOKOFF, JEFF, Education: Indiana University, M.A.: History and Philosophy of Science, 1994; Indiana University, M.L.S., 1994; University of California - Santa Cruz, B.A.: Philosophy, 1987. Current Position: Collection Development Librarian, Simmons College Library, 2005-present. Previous Positions: Head of Reference Services - Lamont Library, Harvard University, 2000-04; Electronic Resources Coordinator, DePaul University, 1999-2000; Reference Librarian, DePaul University, 1997-99; Information Technology Librarian, Connecticut College, 1995-97. ALA Activities: ALCTS-CMDS: Chair, Collection Development of Electronic Resources Committee, 2005-06; ALCTS-CMDS: Member, Collection Development of Electronic Resources Committee, 2003-05; RUSA-MARS: Vice Chair, Managers in MARS Discussion Group, 2002-03; ARCL: Member, Effective Practices Committee, 2001-03; RUSA-MARS: Member, Products and Services Committee, 1999-2002; ALA-Booklist: Editorial Board Member, Reference Books Bulletin, 1998-2000; ACRL-CLS: Member, Leadership Committee, 1997-99; ALA-OA: Member, External Review Panel, 2006; ALA: Diversity Award Jury, 2004; ALA: EBSCO Award Jury, 2003. Offices Held outside of ALA: Illinois Library Association: Member, Membership Committee, 1998-2000. Membership in Other Professional and Related Organizations: Illinois Library Association, 1998-2000. Publications: Associate Editor/Chapter Editor, Magazines for Libraries (Bowker), 2002-2005; "Well-constructed Gophers: Is your Gopher golden?," Computer Mediated Communication Magazine, 1995; Co-author, Internet Skills for Information Networking (SLIS - Indiana University), 1995. Honors, Awards, Prizes, Medals, Citations: Beta Phi Mu. Accomplishments: I have focused on the local level as I work to make collections work more effectively at my institution(s). At Connecticut College, I brought free web resources into the collection to support the college's curricular mission. At DePaul University in the late 1990's, in addition to collecting resources across formats and subjects, I created an organizational environment and procedures to assure more effective selection and maintenance of e-resources. At Harvard: 1) I was the first e-resources coordinator for humanities resources within the College Library; 2) served on the OPAC advisory group. At Simmons, I am in the process of re-organizing our collections activities as we continue through a construction process with an eye towards a reorganized collection in our new building. Within ALA, beyond my involvement in various committees, I've also presented poster sessions, moderated an ACRL panel, maintained websites, and gave a presentation at the Toronto conference.

STATEMENT: Three areas of collection management stand out to me: 1) scholarly communication and the continuing serials crisis, 2) re-thinking our organizational systems and technical standards along with the growing reliance on networked electronic resources, 3) changing definitions of the local collection with the increasing speed of delivery/access to collections that are not locally-owned. We must continue to reconsider our involvement in the creation and dissemination of knowledge and be active in the development of new ways of creating collections that serve our communities in a cost-effective and easy-to-access manner. We must support the development of standards for ERMs and in other areas that will increase the interoperability of local and vendor systems. With collections, systems and public services work at various sizes and kinds of institutions, I believe that I have a broad perspective on issues of collection management that can benefit our section.

04. CLENNON, CINDY, Education: University of Illinois at Urbana-Champaign, M.S. LIS, 2002. Current Position: Assistant Director, Center for Library Initiatives, Committee on Institutional Cooperation, 2005-present. Previous Positions: Contract Coordinator/Program Manager for Library Collaboration, Committee on Institutional Cooperation, 1996-2005. ALA Activities: ALCTS CMDS: Committee Chair, Collection Development and Electronic Resources, 2002-05; ALCTS: Member, Blackwell Scholarship Jury, 2004-04; ALCTS CMDS: Committee Member, Collection Development and Electronic Resources, 1999-2001. Offices Held outside of ALA: Lincoln Trails Library System:

Committee Member, Strategic Planning Committee, 2005-06; Philo Public Library: Trustee, 2003-05. Accomplishments: CIC Standardized Agreement Language - first authored in 1999 ICOLC Member since 1997 Managing large-scale licensing efforts since 1996

STATEMENT: Collection development staff face many challenges attempting to juggle the shifting priorities and economic constraints facing libraries today. ALCTS should be providing support, assistance and a voice for our members that deal with these challenges and complexities on a daily basis. We have a great opportunity to make a difference within ALA and I would like to be a part of this as a Member-at-large. My goal would be to ensure that the needs and interests of the members are always at the core of our discussions and decision-making.

05. CASSELL, KAY ANN, Education: International University for Graduate Studies, PhD, 2005; Brooklyn College, M.A., 1969; Rutgers University, M.L.S., 1965; Carnegie Mellon University, B.A., 1963. Current Position: Associate Director for Collections and Services, New York Public Library, 1989-present. Previous Positions: University Librarian, New School for Social Research, 1987-88; Executive Director, Coordinating Council of Literary Magazines, 1985-87; Director, Huntington (NY) Public Library, 1981-85. ALA Activities: Freedom to Read Foundation: ALCTS Representative, 2004-Present; ALA Office for Human Resource Development and Recruitment: Chair, Advisory Committee, 2003-04; ALA: Member, Committee on Committees, 1998-2002; ALA: Chair, Publications Committee, 1999-2001; ALA: Member, Council, 1991-2001; ALA: Chair, Membership Committee, 1991-95. Offices Held outside of ALA: Library Public Relations Council: Vice President, 2005-06. Publications: Co-author, Reference/Information Service in the 21st Century, 2006; Developing Reference Collections and Services in an Electronic Age (Neal Schuman Publishers), 1999; Editor, Collection Building, 1993 - present; co-author, Developing Public Library Collections, Policies and Procedures (Neal Schuman Publishers), 1991. Honors, Awards, Prizes, Medals, Citations: ALA Equality Award, 1986; Beta Phi Mu. Accomplishments: My accomplishments have included numerous articles for professional journals and a third book nearly completed. I am active in ALA, have served on many ALA committees and have been active in RUSA. I am an adjunct professor at the Pratt Institute School of Information and Library Science where I teach the basic reference course and often mentor students.

STATEMENT: Collection development is one of my main interests. I am in charge of collection development for the branch libraries of the New York Public Library. We are continually evaluating our collections and looking to the future. It is challenging to meet the many needs of our users for materials in new subject areas, in languages other than English and in new formats. I think we, as librarians, will continue to be challenged as we develop collections in a global environment with many choices. I am also concerned about maintaining our access to all kinds of materials for our users. We live in uncertain times, and as librarians we must protect the rights and privacy of our users. I think we must be vigilant and strong.

06. TEZLA, KATHY E, Education: University of Michigan, MLS, 1983; University of Minnesota, MA: History-19th Century East Central Europe, 1980; University of Minnesota, BA: History-Modern European Diplomatic History, 1970. Current Position: Head of Collection Development, Carleton College, 1999-present. Previous Positions: Head of Center for Government Information, Woodruff General Library, Emory University, 1992-99; Coordinator of the Social Science Collections, Woodruff General Library, Emory University, 1986-92; Assistant Librarian/Joint Appointment in Reference and Technical Services, Harlan Hatcher Graduate Library, University of Michigan, 1984-86; Research Analyst, Federal Research Division, Library of Congress, 1982-84. ALA Activities: ALCTS: Member,

STATEMENT: ALCTS is approaching its 50 Anniversary in 2007 and serves as the forum for information providers who work in collections, preservation, and technical services to shape discussions and plans for action in response to new technologies in acquisition, cataloging, collection development, preservation, and serials for all library materials in all formats. Over the past 22 years as an active member of ALCTS I have found its membership, governing and committee structures to be valuable resources. With the increasing amounts of information born digital and stored in institutional repositories, I am most interested in seeking ways of thinking about new information models on which the emerging digital libraries can be based. I would welcome the opportunity to address the issues raised by the Open Access Initiative and its efforts to create a new business model for disseminating scholarly research and help shape our profession's efforts to provide standards for preservation.
