

At the upcoming ALA Annual meeting
the RBMS Collection Development discussion group will meet on Saturday, June 23, 2018
from 1:00-2:00PM
in the Sheraton New Orleans, Orpheus Room.

We will discuss the impact of shared and consortial collecting on the purview and priorities of selectors/bibliographers/curators within special collections. It's an opportunity to learn more, ask questions, and share experiences. This will necessarily also be a discussion about evolving collection development roles across general and special collections at various libraries as well as among multiple libraries.

The discussion is a follow-up to a panel on shared collections at the RBMS conference on Thursday, June 21, but attendance at that panel is by no means mandatory to participate in this discussion.

This is our last session as the co-convenors for this discussion group, and we look forward to seeing many of you there.
