2009 Amelia Bloomer List

Introduction

2008 was a watershed year for women across the globe. Women in our nation garnered a series of firsts: the first female speaker of the house, the first female governor of North Carolina, the first Democratic female presidential candidate, the most women Senators ever in the U.S. Senate. Dara Torres became the first woman over 40 to swim in the Olympics, while Eri Yoshida became Japan’s first female professional baseball player. Dr. Peggy Whitson became the first female commander of the International Space Station, while Lieutenant General Ann Dunwoody became the first United States female four star general. Fahmida Mirza became the first female Speaker of Pakistan’s National Assembly, while Quentin Bryce became Australia’s first female Governor-General.

However, these “firsts” still must be seen in context. Conditions are far from universally improved around the world. While the incoming American president lifted the global gag rule against abortion and signed the Lilly Ledbetter Equal Pay Act, he also bartered away Medicare support for women’s reproductive health. The stigma of “pink collar” careers and the reality of unequal pay still exist, even as women are becoming power brokers and filling top positions in companies worldwide. Across the globe, women are still intimidated, looked down upon, and, more often than men, the subject of mental, emotional, and physical violence. Not all women have the right to vote or the right to make choices about their reproductive health. What rights that do exist often exist only at the whim of those in power. At the same time, media and literary images of girls and women as mere sexual commodities continue to rain down upon our youth, often portraying them as nothing more than “hoes” and “bitches.” The more things change, the more they remain the same.

Exemplary books for girls and young women that celebrate their strengths and nourish their potential are needed now more than ever. The Amelia Bloomer Project produces an annual list of books for young readers, ages birth through 18, that contain significant feminist content—not just cardboard “feisty” or “spunky” girls and women, but tales of those who have broken barriers and have fought to change their situations and their environment. Members of the 2008-09 Amelia Bloomer Project committee evaluated over 400 submissions, discussed 128 titles, and finally, selected some 68 books for children and youth that comprise the best feminist books published in the last year and a half. These books show girls and women—past and present, real and fictional—breaking stereotypes to follow their dreams and pursue their goals, challenging cultural and familial stereotypes to gain an education, taking charge and making plans for community, regional, national, and world change. We celebrate the history of feminism and highlight strides made in U.S. history in particular, and hope that these books inspire readers to make the world a better place for all.

While savoring these accounts of real-world accomplishments, we also rejoice in the stories and graphic novels that dare to imagine other worlds and lives. We honor the authors, editors, illustrators, and celebrate the publishers large and small who make these books possible. We fervently hope that they will bring more feminist works into the light. We-girls and boys, women and men-now more than ever need role models. We need to be reminded that brave women and men paved the way to the rights we enjoy today. We need to see men and women creating a new future with greater equality for all- regardless of gender. We need real life heroes and positive, fully formed female superheroes. We are truly the change we seek: we must find within ourselves the bravery and conviction to keep fighting for all who make these books possible.

The Amelia Bloomer Project is a committee of the Feminist Task Force of the Social Responsibilities Round Table of the American Library Association. The 2008-09 committee members are as follows: Angela Semifero, Marshall District Library (MI); Barbara Ward, Washington State University (WA); Beth Bolshewsky, San Marino Unified School District (CA); Francesa Burgess, Brooklyn Public Library (NY); Dana Campbell, Corvallis-Benton County Public Library (OR); Jane Cothron, co-chair, Lincoln County Library District (OR); Laurene Zaporozhetz, Murray State University (KY); Maureen McCoy, Brooklyn Public Library (NY); Christie Gibrich, co-chair, Bowles Life Center Branch Library (TX).

The 2009 Amelia Bloomer List

Picture books

Fiction

Rejected by classmates for her love of science and mechanics, Violet’s wild invention saves the day when others need her help.

Grace’s bid to be class president becomes a true contest when the most popular boy in school runs against her.

In all kinds of weather, “that book woman”-a librarian on horseback-delivers books to a skeptical Cal and his family in the Kentucky mountains during the Depression.

With her new shoes, Sophy runs through the rice fields of Cambodia to the local school, where, as the only girl, she strives to achieve her dream of an education.

Dandi’s dreams are shattered when the people who awarded the prize for her winning essay on becoming a batboy for the Kansas City A’s baseball team discover that she is a girl and withdraw her prize.

While Santa is well-known, the actual manager of Claus Enterprises is Mrs. Claus, who can do anything to which she puts her mind and energy.

Non-Fiction

As spies, cannoneers, poets and protesters, the founding mothers of the American Revolution fought for freedom in their own patriotic ways.

During the late 1800’s when only men could vote, Belva Lockwood earned a law degree, successfully argued cases before the Supreme Court, and ran for the office of President of the United States.

Born into slavery, Ida B. Wells became an educator, author, and renowned civil rights activist who was instrumental in stopping the practice of lynching in the South.

Young Amelia Earhart, refusing to be discouraged by the protests of her family, dreams of flying airplanes and works to bring her dreams to life.

Hillary Rodham Clinton used her energy, intelligence and determination to follow her dreams and make a difference in the world around her.

When she discovered that her native Kenya had lost most of its trees, Wangari Maathai launched a movement to replant them, bringing hope and new resources to the women of the country.

Although lacking a college education, Margaret Chase Smith used her many accomplishments as a Congresswoman to support her candidacy for President in 1964.

Seeing the injustice of the limited opportunities of the women around her, Elizabeth Cady Stanton challenged her place in life and fought for her rights and the rights of all women.

Growing up surrounded by the injustice migrant workers face, Emma Tenayuca leads over 12,000 pecan shellers in Texas to fight for better wages and living conditions.

Beginning with just nine seedlings, Wangari Maathai, a Kenyan woman who loved her country, fulfilled her dream of bringing peace and prosperity to her land by organizing the women to plant trees.

During the Dark Ages, when most people were illiterate and women were seen as having little value, Hildegard transformed the world around her through her music, her scholarship, her preaching, and her visions of the face of a female God.

Middle Readers

Fiction

Joan and Fox (aka Newt and Sarah) write stories that tell the truths of their lives, win a writing contest, and learn that even as girls, their descriptions can open the world not only for themselves, but for others.

In contemporary Pakistan, Nazia drops out of school to help provide for her family, sacrificing her dreams and jeopardizing her future.

Eleven-year-old Violet follows her older sister to Nashville, Tennessee, where she works with the suffragists who are trying to persuade an all-male legislature to ratify the 19th Amendment to the Constitution, guaranteeing women the right to vote.

Widowed before she has even moved into her husband’s house, 12-year-old child-bride Leela is forced into “keeping corner”-an entire year of confinement and mourning in isolation. Through the visits of her teacher, Leela begins to learn about the outside world, gaining an interest in philosophy, sciences, and the news of Gandhi and the Great War as it affects India in 1918.

Surviving on her own in Victorian London, Enola Holmes-Sherlock’s younger sister-receives a mysterious pink fan from a friend who needs her help to escape an arranged marriage.
Non-Fiction

In the history of the Nobel Peace Prize, only twelve women have won, from Bertha von Suttner, one of the first peace activists in the twentieth century, to Wangari Maathai, winner of the prize in 2004.

Hypatia’s death at the hands of a Christian mob in Alexandria, Egypt, robbed the ancient world of a brilliant philosopher and mathematician, whose theories and discoveries still inform the ways in which we view the world.

The fire at the Triangle Shirtwaist Factory in 1911 killed 146 people, bringing together the women’s suffrage and labor movements and emphasizing the need for laws guaranteeing worker safety.

A workbook celebrating girls’ lives presents strategies to deal with the pressure to be perfect that abounds in today’s society.

From pioneers of the early 1900s through today’s innovators, women filmmakers broke boundaries to create important stories and explore new filmmaking techniques.

Young Adult

Fiction

When an eerie stranger offers to spin straw into gold, Charlotte must discover the benefactor’s name and history before the price of his generosity destroys her village.

The king's bully, Lady Katsa, despised for her Grace as a highly trained killing machine as well as her gender, works secretly to right wrongs and protect those in need.

When her little sister loses the lottery and becomes the tribute for the annual Hunger Games, a fight to the death shown on government-sponsored reality television, 16-year-old hunter Katniss Everdeen volunteers to take her place, and challenges the system in the process.

In this tale of ecology and magic, Polly Green tries to save her family and the wilderness she loves.

Through three wars for Cuban independence, Rosa, called a witch by her enemies, heals sickness with herbal medicines and helps all, regardless of race or nationality.

After a debilitating accident derails her pro-snowboarding dreams and costs her the only place she feels she can be herself, 16-year-old Syrah Cheng must re-examine who she is and where she wants to go.

Just when Dewey Kerrigan is settling into a new life in Alamagordo with the Gordons, conflicts in the family over women’s limited career choices and involvement in the atomic bomb control movement as well as the arrival of Dewey’s long-lost mother threaten Dewey’s dream of attending university.

When Frankie learns that she cannot join the all-male secret society at her exclusive prep school, she takes matters into her own hands.
Following the detonation of the peace bomb, worldwide civilizations collapsed. In sub-Saharan Africa, Ejii comes of age in a village where women have no value and no rights. With the example of a wandering woman warrior, Ejii works to claim her powers and uses her new abilities to prevent war between the peoples of the different worlds.

Kidnapped as a young child, and sexually and emotionally tortured for years, a girl who has lost everything—even her name—must find the inner strength not only to save herself, but also to end the cycle of abuse and torture before the man who kidnapped her captures another girl.

Senior Jamie Carcaterra, a.k.a. “Fat Girl”, uses her high school newspaper column to expose discrimination against fat people; the controversy that ensues spills over into the community attracting national attention.

Against the backdrop of the movement for India’s independence from British rule, Vidya is determined to gain her own independence from her family and continue her education.

Kayla and Rosalie’s plan to expose the sexist selection process for their high school dance squad backfires when Kayla makes the team.

Learn the nuts, bolts and business of creating a rock band—an introduction especially for girls who want to push the boundaries—and play some awesome rock ‘n roll!

From Babylonian priestess En Heduanna to Sally Ride and Carolyn Shoemaker, women astronomers faced obstacles and prejudices as they studied and reached for the stars.

These trailblazers overcame obstacles and took control of their own lives and art to share their unique visions and inspire others.

Fifteen women who made the choice to have abortions discuss their lives and the thorny issues surrounding termination of pregnancies.

Traces the political and cultural roles of women throughout the twentieth century, including media representations, landmark accomplishments, and social movements.

Rape, a crime that crosses gender and age boundaries, can happen to anyone, and everyone-especially students-needs to know how to help when someone he or she knows becomes a victim.

Share the challenges and celebrations of being a girl in today’s world through this collection of artwork, stories, and poetry.

Tennis great Billie Jean King writes about her victory in the 1973 Battle of the Sexes, shares strategies of putting her beliefs into action, and gives tips and advice for the next generation.

Portraits and intimate interviews of Afghani women show the courage required for them to survive-and possibly thrive-in the sexist culture of their war-torn country.

In 1926, four female American swimmers faced both physical and mental challenges in the contest to be the first woman to swim the English Channel.

Long before women were able to vote, Belva Lockwood became the first women to practice law and argue before the Supreme Court before she ran for president of the United States on the Equal Rights Party ticket in 1884.

This maintenance manual for girls’ bodies provides answers for many questions, including what is ‘normal’ and how to look and feel your best.

Explore the life and loves of labor activist and free-love advocate Emma Goldman as told in comic book format.

While hospitalized for treatment of bulimia, Shivack uses an illustrated journal to document her battle with Ed, her eating disorder.

Valenti, Jessica. He’s a Stud, She’s a Slut and 49 Other Double Standards Every Woman Should Know. 2008. 219p. Perseus Books/ Seal Press, $13.95 (978-1-58005-245-0). Gr. 9-12.

This catalogue of the 50 most common double standards that women deal with daily includes tips and solutions about how to respond to them and challenge the underlying sexist perceptions.

This timeline shows the often unrecognized contributions of hundreds of women who changed America through their work in the sciences, education, arts, politics, and social activism, from the 1500s to the present.