5. Program Proposal:
   - Title: Ubiquitous Video: Can libraries offer it? (or Can libraries adapt?)
   Is your library embracing the demand for streaming video content? Video is becoming a ubiquitous medium, and educators are demanding more content and easier access. Hear from a librarian, a faculty member, and a content developer as they discuss the changing demands for multimedia access and delivery; how libraries can adapt collection development strategies and access methods to meet these needs; and how video collections are conceptualized to meet the needs of their academic markets.
   Learning Outcomes:
   - Understand the demands for multimedia delivery in order to support teaching and learning on campus. [classroom faculty member will speak on]
   - Consider issues with collecting, storing and accessing streaming video in order to deliver multimedia content faster and with greater access. [librarian will speak on]
   - Learn how vendors are developing, marketing, and licensing their video content in order to know the content and delivery options available on the market. [vendor(s) will speak on]
