

Resolution to Reunite Detained Migrant Children with their Parents

Whereas, the United States (US) has never ratified the United Nations (UN) Convention Rights of the Child, protecting children from discrimination based on their parent's or legal guardian's sex, race, religion, and other identifiers;

Whereas, the US "zero tolerance policy" resulted in the criminalization of adults at the border and the traumatic separation of over 2,300 migrant children from their parents or legal guardians;

Whereas, Executive Order 13841, Affording Congress an Opportunity to Address Family Separation (June 20, 2018), does not require that the already detained migrant children be reunited with their parents or their legal guardians;

Whereas, "refugees should not be penalized for their illegal entry or stay," and not be "charged with immigration or criminal offenses relating to the seeking of asylum, or being arbitrarily detained purely on the basis of seeking asylum," (UN General Assembly resolution 429(V) of December 14, 1950);

Whereas, the American Library Association has gone on record opposing the refugee family separation policy; now, therefore, be it

Resolved, that the American Library Association (ALA), on behalf of its members:

2. Reaffirms the "Resolution on Improving Access to Spanish, Bilingual, and Books in Various Languages for Children in Detention Centers" (2015-2016 CD#38);
