ACRL offers early-bird registration for seventh national conference

The Association of College and Research Libraries (ACRL) is offering early-bird registration for its seventh national conference, "Continuity and Transformation: The Promise of Confluence," scheduled for March 29-April 1, 1995, in Pittsburgh.

The rates for ACRL and Pennsylvania Library Association (PLA) members who register before January 6 is $160; American Library Association (ALA) members $185, nonmembers, $280 and full-time library school students $105. The rates increase beginning January 7 through February 28. ACRL and PLA members can register for $185, ALA members, $225, nonmembers $305 and full-time library school students, $105. On-site registration will be $225 for ACRL and PLA members, $265 for ALA members, $345 for nonmembers and $145 for full-time library school students.

Approximately 2,500 librarians are expected to participate in ACRL's conference that will feature more than 200 contributed papers, panel sessions, poster sessions and roundtable discussions, and tour more than 200 exhibits. Special and local tours are also planned. The renowned Carnegie Museum will be the site of the all-conference reception.

ACRL members will automatically receive registration materials. Others should call, 800-545-2433, ext. 2521, or 312-280-2521.

ACRL is a division of the American Library Association.
